I loved the concepts and my kids had a really fun time going through the activity book. Each day they were excited about "Money Class." However, this kit is really only suited for one child. It comes with only one workbook, (which I had to make copies of for my two kids), ONE set of money envelopes and ONE Chore Chart. I do have to say the chore chart was made from a really sturdy magnetic white board, unlike cardboard whiteboards I have seen used for chore charts. The magnets that come with it are great as well, but it can really only be used by one child at a time. The Parent handbook that was included in the kit was very light on info, however the kit comes with a free e-book copy of the book Smart Money Smart Kids which is full of great information.

My 3 year old daughter loves earning and spending money! We hung the chart on the refrigerator and she will look at it daily to be sure she has made money all the possible ways for that day. I keep the envelopes in my purse so she can always spend her hard earned money when she pleases. It helps a ton when she's begging for petty items at the store that I don't want to purchase. I tell her she can spend her own money on it but she only has $5 and this will take 4 of them. She will totally rethink the situation and half the time reasonably decide it's not worth it. It's fun and it teaches the meaning of a dollar at such a young age. I still buy her stuff frequently but for the extra little stuffed animal she sees and wants it's up to her if it's worth her dollars. Since she is 3 we typically only use the spending envelope but have also used the savings envelope so she could save up for a $25 scooter. She felt so proud the day that she could purchase it for herself. As Dave has recommended, it is usually best to introduce the quick spending reward to this age group and later introduce the savings and giving. I agree with that plan

Received the package yesterday and noticed that the wrong money envelope was sent. Instead of give, save and spend we were sent give, save, save. I don't want to return the whole product, I just need a "spend" money pouch. I'm looking forward to getting started with my son. Looks like I might need to just get crafty with that one pouch. Everything else looks good. I will change the rating if this is fixed.

My daughter is already jumping into the lessons. We can't wait to watch her grow in financial health and begin to live like no one else at a young age!

Love this idea and the concept. They say teach them while they are young. I bought this as a Christmas gift for my three-year-old niece. She is now excited to complete her chores and excited to determine which money savings bag she wants to put her money in. I highly recommend this product .

I ordered two of these kits for my 11 yr and 9 yr old daughter. We have tried other charts before, but none seemed to work. We sat down together and they picked out the chores that they wanted to do. We filled up their lists and then assigned dollar amounts to each. They have both been motivated to do something from their list each day. I say "is there anything on your list you could do today?" I also remind them to check it off. If they don't it won't be paid. My 2 yr old saw the chart and of course now she wants one as well. Their first payday is this Thursday. It will be exciting for them to see how much they've earned. I also am loving help around the house!

I purchase this for my 4 & 6 year old kids. BEST. IDEA. EVER. We pay our "commissions" on a daily basis. I went from kids whining about simple chores to waking up in the morning and finding my 6 year old dusting the blinds to earn a $0.15 commission. Love it!

I bought 2 of these for my grandchildren & was so pleased I bought one for my other grandson to start him out on the right foot with budgeting.
