Don't Make That Claim

Synopsis

The author is a retired insurance adjuster who has handled countless property damage claims over 20 years. Many of the claims often pursued by homeowners should never be made. These claims are routinely denied or result in minimal payment. In turn, the homeowner then suffers increased premiums, cancellation, non-renewal, missed no-claims discounts, and/or the creation of a bad claims history. The most commonly pursued claims by homeowners are addressed in detail, and include photos and analysis as to why these claims should never be made. Become informed and prepared for damage situations that all homeowners will face. Avoid making pointless claims. Become educated with this unfamiliar aspect of owning a home. Every homeowner will benefit, and they will no longer be uninformed. Most importantly, the reader will learn to avoid making unwarranted claims that will result in poor consequences.
