Customer Reviews

Born into slavery, Booker T. Washington is freed when he is nine years old. To help support his family, he then works as a salt packer, coal miner, and house servant. All the while, he longs to become educated and to educate others. Poverty, racism, and other obstacles stand in his way. Will he overcome them all, or will the many barriers prove stronger than his unwavering determination? --From the Publisher

William Andrews is Joyce and Elizabeth Hall Professor of American Literature at the University of Kansas.

Great book! I first read this book as a Freshman at Tuskegee University in 1999. I recently bought 2 for high school students at my church.

Interesting book.

Very pleased with the overall condition of the book.
