Last year the Cousteau Society launched a major expedition to Papua, New Guinea, and its offshore islands as part of a new series, "Rediscovery of the World." The purpose was to explore diverse cultures and an exotic environment, and note ecological problems. The trek required two ships (Calypso and the new windship Alcyone), two aircraft, Zodiacs, trucks and jeeps to carry the diving, film and scientific teams. Jacques Cousteau's son and Richards, coauthors of Journey , here give us a day-by-day account of the various teams at work on land and underwater. They visit gold mines and butterfly farms, explore sunken vessels from World War II and fabulous coral reefs; they attend initiation ceremonies and other tribal rites. This is an exciting, instructive re-creation of the journey-adventure, and the photographs are magnificent. BOMC dividend selection; Nature Book Society alternate; author tour. I love Cousteau and family but am only familiar with the videos. Give me something to look at!Thanks
